After the film, a facilitated community discussion will provide participants with the opportunity to ask questions, discuss topics of interest, share their views, and hear about resources available in our local communities. Light refreshments will be served.

Paper Tigers follows a year in the life of an alternative high school that has radically changed its approach to disciplining its students, and has become a promising model for how to break the cycles of poverty, violence and disease that affect families. The theme of the film highlights the important role that individuals, communities and families have in helping youth lead healthy, productive and resilient lives.
